

President Harding standing beneath the monster guns of the battleship Pennsylvania just before he reviewed the Atlantic fleet on April 28, and addressed the officers in a memorable speech on America's place in the world.

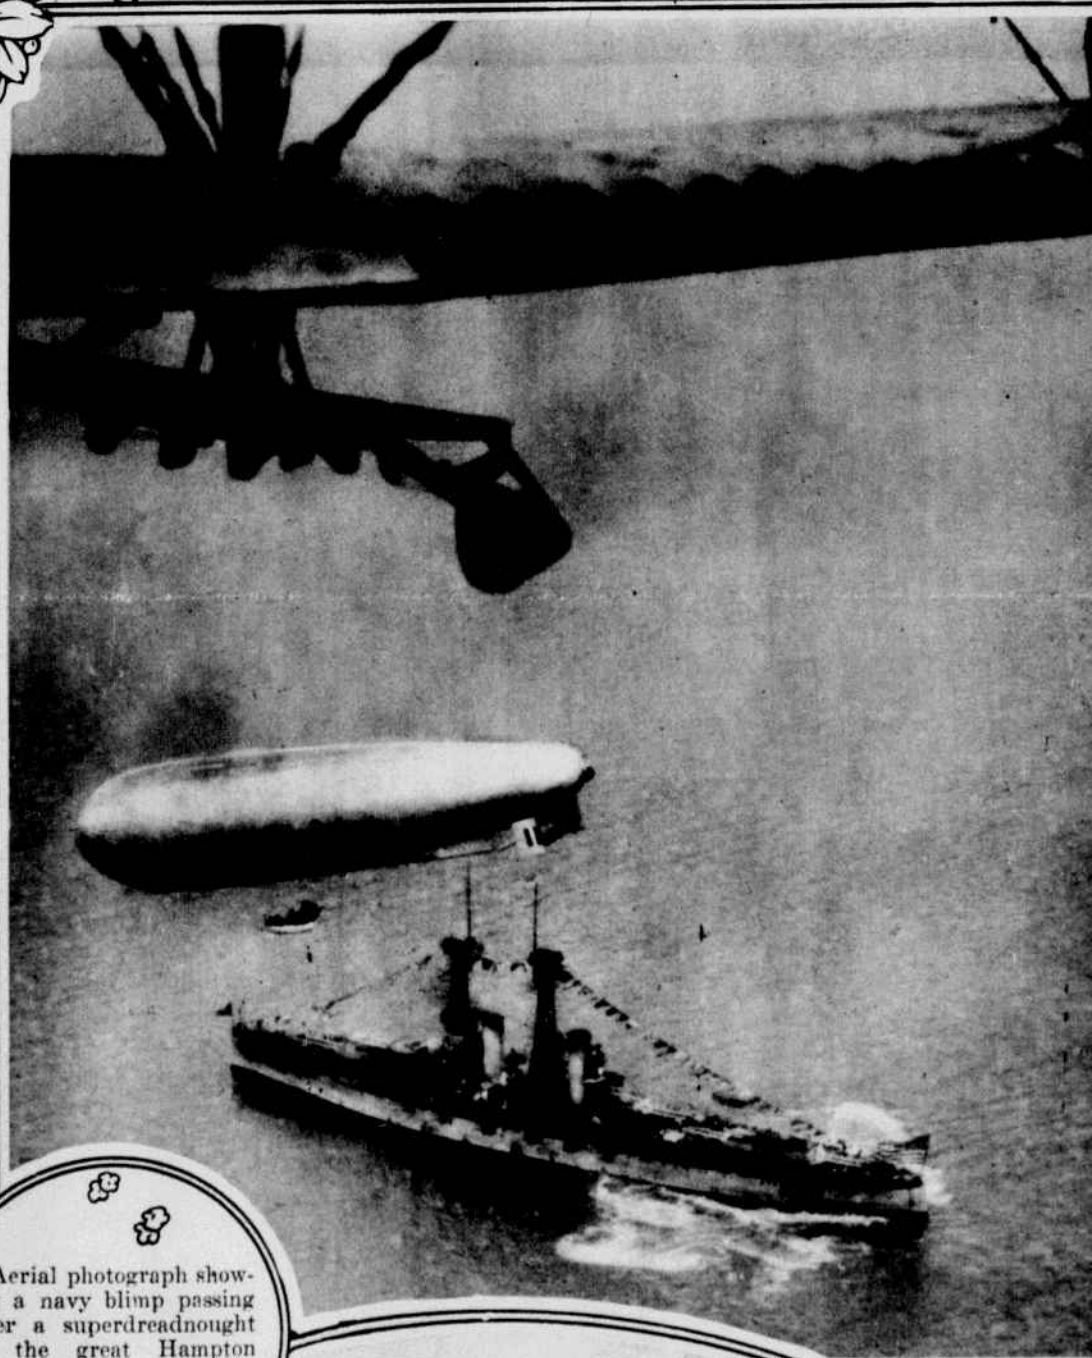

One small bit of the fleet in Hampton Roads just before the review by President Harding, the first formal survey he has made since he took office. Photograph taken from the deck of the flagship Pennsylvania.

Funeral of the former Kaiserin of Germany—one of the best pictures of the occasion to reach the United States. The cortege leaving the Wildpark station, Potsdam, for the Hohenzollern Mausoleum. Note the Kaiserin's sons in the old German uniforms marching at the right of the hearse. The ex-Crown Prince was not present.

The old junkers out in force at the funeral of the former Kaiserin. Note Hindenburg (carrying baton) with Ludendorff at his left and Tirpitz, father of the ruthless submarine war, at extreme left of the photograph, easily distinguished by his dark naval uniform.

The student corps of Potsdam on its way to the Wildpark chapel to attend the funeral of the former Kaiserin. They appeared in all their pre-war regalia and carrying the banners they have treasured for many years. Note the wreath carried by the leaders.
